New members often discover their deepest connection to AIA at one of more than 200 local, state, and international chapters, which are the heart and backbone of AIA. Focused on needs, opportunities, and challenges in members’ immediate communities, AIA chapters offer valuable benefits, events, and education tailored specifically to local interests and concerns. No matter where you live, there’s an AIA community near you. Find yours at aia.org/chapters.
Since 1857, when 13 architects formed what would become The American Institute of Architects, the letters AIA have signified the highest standards in architectural practice. Today, more than 160 years later, with 94,000+ members, the letters AIA still deliver an abiding promise of rigorous education, extensive training, real-world experience, and a commitment to professional excellence recognized by clients, civic leaders, and the public. When you join AIA as a new member, you can immediately start using the AIA designation after your name to enhance your personal brand and professional standing.

THE A’LIST
AIA Conference on Architecture

Every year, AIA hosts this international gathering of leaders in architecture and beyond to define the year ahead. The conference delivers visionary speakers, hundreds of sessions, exclusive local architecture tours, inspired networking, and the opportunity to learn from the best. The conference’s Architecture Expo features hundreds of leading brands and manufacturers with the newest high-tech products and sustainable materials to hit the market. New AIA members register for only $99. Learn more and sign up for updates at aia.org/conference.
COMMUNITY
AIA is where members network. Celebrate. Collaborate. Socialize. And grow. We’re a community of passionate individuals bound by common values, standards, and ethics. Most importantly, we’re a community united by a shared drive to create a better world through the power of design. AIA is where we gather to celebrate successes, meet shared challenges, and shape the future of our careers, our practice, our profession, and our world. The power of AIA is you.
With 94,000+ members, AIA is the largest, most influential network of architecture and design professionals. More than 200 local, state, and international chapters, and dozens of member groups, AIA Knowledge Communities, and regional and national events create endless opportunities to engage, socialize, learn, and lead the profession. Whether you’re a recent grad or an established leader, you’ll find a rich and ever-changing landscape of social, professional, and educational experiences designed to advance your career and build professional connections that last a lifetime. You belong here.

From small innovations to crowning career achievements, AIA celebrates effort, impact, and accomplishment. AIA’s local and national awards are among the most prestigious in the industry and recognize personal successes, honor professional accomplishments, and celebrate architecture’s impact on shaping our communities. Each year, our national program features 30+ awards, including the prestigious Architecture Awards for the best contemporary architecture and the Gold Medal, AIA’s highest annual honor.

AIA invests in creating new knowledge and supporting the local community innovators and leaders of today and tomorrow. Through grants, fellowships, and scholarships like the Diversity Advancement Scholarship, the Shriver Center’s Women’s Leadership Summit Grant, the Upjohn Research Initiative, and the AIA College of Fellows Latrobe Prize, AIA and its philanthropic partner the Architects Foundation seek and support extraordinary problem solvers and their solutions with more than $100,000 in grants and $200,000 in new scholarships each year.

AIA’s award-winning Communities by Design (CxD) program has catalyzed billions of dollars in sustainable development in communities all over the world. CxD teams combine a customized range of disciplines and professions in an integrated community design process that brings together government and civic leaders, the business sector, nonprofit leaders and the general public to build collective action plans for key local issues. The program has led to dramatic transformations in small rural towns and large urban jurisdictions and has been adapted widely around the world.

Pioneering solutions: Edward Mazria, FAIA, won the 2021 AIA Gold Medal for his work sounding the alarm on climate change and motivating the architecture profession to act. Ed was one of the first architects to calculate the built environment’s impact on the climate crisis, and his 2030 Challenge inspired AIA to launch the 2030 Commitment to reduce operational carbon in buildings. Ed’s environmentally conscious work and his climate advocacy champion the impact and the responsibility of sustainable planning and design. He’s a member.
KNOWLEDGE
The designed world is getting more complex. So AIA works tirelessly to deliver the information and education that helps you create, anticipate, and innovate. That means industry-leading continuing education from acclaimed architects, designers, and firms. Thought leadership and insights on critical, current issues. And a range of professional tools, expert resources, and industry innovations to constantly help you transform your practice and profession.
AIA’s best-in-class continuing education promises new ideas, skills, and career opportunities. Earn a certificate, master new skills, or earn AXP hours with courses by leading architects through AIAU, your local chapter, core AIA events, or our extensive network of AIA-approved CE providers. Innovative local and national leadership programs like the Women’s Leadership Summit and Next to Lead provide guidance and support for career advancement. The AIA/ACSA Intersections Research Conference and the Design and Health Research Consortium share the latest research and its impact on practice. And ArchiPrep®, our ARE prep resource for AIA members, can help you get licensed faster.

Looking to increase compliance, efficiency, effectiveness, and competitive advantage? AIA Best Practices is a collection of expert advice and experience on professional practice, firm management, project delivery, and contracts, aligned with the Architect’s Handbook of Professional Practice, 15th edition. Topics include pro bono work, firm valuation, equitable culture, public interest design, and more. New content and definitive articles ensure you’re current with the most important trends shaping practice and the marketplace.

AIA makes meeting annual continuing education requirements easier and rewarding with AIAU—our premier online learning platform for architects and design professionals. AIAU is your source for AIA LU | Elective, LU | HSW, GBCI, ADA, and/or RIBA courses by award-winning architects and firms. There are 170+ curated courses, four exclusive certificate programs, and a range of free live courses including the Emerge Series, which offers free experience hours for Associate AIA members.

ADVOCACY
AIA is powered by the collective voice and actions of 94,000+ members. Together, we’re taking on urgent issues affecting the architecture profession, in numbers that are making a difference. Because when you provide talented, passionate professionals and committed community members access to resources and leadership opportunities, they become a critical voice for change and a powerful force for good. Get ready to raise your voice.
Answering with action:

Buildings account for roughly 40% of annual fossil fuel carbon-dioxide emissions. And that big number requires big action. Blueprint for Better is AIA’s call for big action. More specifically, it’s a call to design a zero-carbon, resilient, healthy, just, and equitable future for everyone. Architects can’t do it alone. But together—architects, engineers, design professionals, contractors, civic leaders, and the public—we can transform the day-to-day practice of architecture and build a better future.
This is day-to-day AIA: The vital tools and practical information that benefit every architect, every day. Comprehensive, industry-standard contracts and forms. Architect-approved insurance programs. Exclusive discounts. And an ever-growing collection of articles and inspiration to help you discover things you love and new approaches to design. All expertly curated to meet your ever-changing interests and needs.
