

April 8, 2022

To All Members of Congress,

American Institute of Architects (AIA) stands firmly against any federal mandate on architectural design style. There is no design style that is inherently more or less valuable than any other.

As a design professional, I support the bipartisan Congressional Democracy in Design Act of 2021 (H.R. 5291). This legislation is important because:

- Officially maintaining a style-neutral position respects this country's regional differences, as various communities may have different preferences, topographies, and design traditions.
- It encourages American architectural innovation.
- It supports a style-neutral approach that focuses on community-centered decision-making, demonstrated architectural skill, and public input for community-based federal building projects.

As architects and design professionals, we call on Congress to respect the creativity and freedom required to inspire the design of our federal structures. Government buildings must reflect the citizens they are designed to serve. We ask you to support and enact the Democracy in Design Act of 2021.

Sincerely,
